Cinema St. Louis offers French programming at the annual Robert Classic French Film Festival and the Robert French and French-Language Focus at the Whitaker St. Louis International Film Festival (Nov. 7-17, 2019).
The 11th Annual Robert Classic French Film Festival — presented by TV5MONDE and produced by Cinema St. Louis — celebrates St. Louis’ Gallic heritage and France’s cinematic legacy. The featured films span the decades from the 1930s through the 1990s, offering a revealing overview of French cinema.

The schedule is rounded out by Robert Bresson’s final film, “L’argent,” and two 1969 films celebrating their 50th anniversaries: Luis Buñuel’s “The Milky Way” and Eric Rohmer’s “My Night at Maud’s.”

Every program features introductions and discussions by film or French scholars and critics. The discussions will place the works in the contexts of both film and French history and provide close analyses.

All films are in French with English subtitles.

The 317th Platoon/La 317ème section

Pierre Schoendoerffer, 1965, 100 min., B&W, new restoration, DCP projection source

In Pierre Schoendoerffer’s film adaptation of his own well-regarded novel — shot by the great Raoul Coutard — a platoon of French soldiers and Laotian allies fight their way through enemy territory and dense jungle to meet up with their compatriots as the Indochina War grinds to a halt. The New York Times hails “The 317th Platoon” as “a genuinely revelatory war movie,” describing it as “a staggeringly engrossing and effective movie, its settings both beautiful and oppressive, its incidents tense and eye-opening.” No less of an authority than Oliver Stone asserts that “The 317th Platoon” and Schoendoerffer’s documentary “The Anderson Platoon” remain the only films that “seem to me to give a realistic image of the war in Indochina.”

With an introduction and post-film discussion by Joshua Ray, film critic for Cinema St. Louis’ The Lens.

Sponsored by Ann Repetto

The Milky Way/La voie lactée

Luís Buñuel, 1969, 101 min., color, Blu-ray projection source

The first of what Luis Buñuel later proclaimed a trilogy (along with “The Discreet Carm of the Bourgeoise” and “The Phantom of Liberty”) about “the search for truth,” “The Milky Way” daringly deconstructs contemporary and traditional views on Catholicism with ribald, rambunctious surreality. Two French beggars (Michel Piccoli and Paul Frankeur), present-day pilgrims en route to Spain’s holy city of Santiago de Compostela, serve as Buñuel’s narrators for an anticlerical history of heresy, told with absurdity and filled with images that rank among Buñuel’s most memorable (stigmatic children, crucified nuns) and hilarious (Jesus considering a good shave). Co-starring Delphine Seyrig, the film is co-written by Buñuel with frequent collaborator Jean-Claude Carrière.

With an introduction and post-film discussion by Pier Marton, video artist and unlearning specialist at the School of No Media. Marton has lectured with his work at the Museum of Modern Art, the Carnegie Museum, and the Walker Art Center.

The Nun/La religieuse

Jacques Rivette, 1966, 140 min., color, new restoration, DCP projection source

In 18th-century France, novice Suzanne (a luminous Anna Karina) is compelled by her family to take her vows and become a nun. Doing what she can to resist, Suzanne is shuttled between convents with widely different Mothers Superior, ranging from maternal to sadistic to amorous. Based on the novel by Denis Diderot, Jacques Rivette’s film was banned on its initial release and its fate became a long-running scandal. New York Times critic J. Hoberman writes: “A writer for the right-wing weekly Carrefour declared: ‘If, in the name of freedom, we let this film be shown, we might just as well throw open the doors of France to all the dirty hairy beatniks of the earth.’”

With an introduction and post-film discussion by Pete Timmermann, interim director of the Webster U. Film Series and adjunct film professor at Webster U.

The Hole/Le trou

Jacques Becker, 1960, 152 min., B&W, new restoration, DCP projection source

Four men in La Santé Prison, staring down the barrel at hard time, decide to execute a prison break and are forced to bring on a fifth member, Claude Gaspard (Marc Michel), when he is assigned to their cell. The particulars of the escape are rendered in painstaking detail as the five men dream of freedom. Director Jacques Becker (whose “Casque d’or” played at the 2018 Classic French Film Festival) cast the film largely with nonprofessionals, among them the actual “king of escapes,” Roland Barbat, on whose story the film is based. In Cahiers du Cinéma, director Jean-Pierre Melville said of “Le trou”: “How many pages would it take to enumerate the wonders of this masterpiece, of this film that I consider — and here I weigh my words carefully — as the greatest French film of all time?”

With an introduction and post-film discussion by Andrew Wyatt, editor of and film critic for Cinema St. Louis’ The Lens and the Gateway Cinephile film blog.

One Sings, the Other Doesn’t/L’une chante l’autre pas

Agnès Varda, 1977, 120 min., color, new restoration, DCP projection source

Agnès Varda’s unsung feminist anthem is both a buoyant chronicle of a transformative friendship and an empowering vision of universal sisterhood. When 17-year-old Pauline (Valérie Mairesse) helps struggling mother of two Suzanne (Thérèse Liotard) procure the money for an abortion, a deep bond forms between the two, one that endures over the course of more than a decade as each searches for her place in the world — encountering the dawning of the women’s movement, dreamy boho musical numbers, and an Iranian adventure along the way. Initially divisive for its sunny, idealized view of female liberation, “One Sings, the Other Doesn’t” now seems all the more radical for its unabashedly utopian spirit.

With an introduction and post-film discussion by Cait Lore, film critic for Cinema St. Louis’ The Lens.
FRIDAY, MARCH 22, 7:30 P.M.

L’argent
Robert Bresson, 1984, 84 min., color, DCP projection source
In his ruthlessly clear-eyed final film, French master Robert Bresson pushed his unique blend of spiritual rumination and formal rigor to a new level of astringency. Transposing a Tolstoy novella to contemporary Paris, "L’argent" follows a counterfeit bill as it originates as a prop in a schoolboy prank, then circulates like a virus among the corrupt and the virtuous alike before landing with a young truck driver and leading him to incarceration and violence. With brutal economy, Bresson constructs his unforgiving vision of original sin out of starkly perceived details, rooting his characters in a dehumanizing material world that withholds any hope of transcendence.

With an introduction and post-film discussion by Colin Burnett, interim chair and associate professor of Film & Media Studies at Washington U. and author of "The Invention of Robert Bresson: The Auteur and His Market."

SATURDAY, MARCH 23, 5 P.M.

Peppermint Soda/Diabolo menthe
Diane Kurys, 1977, 101 min., color, new restoration, DCP projection source
In the vein of such classic coming-of-age classics as François Truffaut’s "The 400 Blows," Diane Kurys’ "Peppermint Soda" captures a particular moment in the tumultuous life and development of young people. Anne (Eléonore Klarwein) and Frédérique (Odile Michel) are sisters entering their teen years in 1963 France, torn between divorced parents and struggling with the confines of their strict school. Along the way, they undergo an awakening both political and romantic. Kurys’ celebrated film revels in the comedy and tragedy of the seemingly mundane, weaving a complex tapestry of everyday existence that also touches on the universal.

With an introduction and post-film discussion by Jean-Louis Pautrot, professor of French and international studies at Saint Louis University.

Sponsored by Jane M. & Bruce P. Robert Charitable Foundation

SATURDAY, MARCH 23, 7:30 P.M.

Cold Water/L’eau froide
Olivier Assayas, 1994, 94 min., color, new restoration, DCP projection source
An acclaimed early work by Olivier Assayas that has long remained unavailable, the deeply felt coming-of-age drama "Cold Water" at long last makes its way to U.S. theaters. Drawing from his own youthful experiences, Assayas revisits the outskirts of Paris in the early 1970s, telling the story of teenage lovers Gilles (Cyprien Fouquet) and Christine (Virginie Ledoyen), whose open rebellion against family and society threatens to tear them apart, as Christine is sent to an institution by her parents and Gilles faces an uncertain future after running into trouble at school. With a rock soundtrack that vividly evokes the period — and provides the backdrop for one of the most memorable party sequences ever committed to film — "Cold Water" is a heartbreaking immersion into the emotional tumult of adolescence.

With an introduction and post-film discussion by Diane Carson, professor emerita of film at St. Louis Community College at Meramec and film critic for KDHX (88.1 FM).

SUNDAY, MARCH 24, 7 P.M.

My Night at Maud’s/Ma nuit chez Maud
Eric Rohmer, 1969, 111 min. B&W, DCP projection source
In the brilliantly accomplished centerpiece of Eric Rohmer’s "Moral Tales" series, Jean-Louis Trintignant plays Jean-Louis, one of the great conflicted figures of ’60s cinema. A pious Catholic engineer in his early 30s, he lives by a strict moral code in order to rationalize his world, drowning himself in mathematics and the philosophy of Pascal. After spotting the delicate, blond Françoise at Mass, he vows to make her his wife, although when he unwittingly spends the night at the apartment of the bold, brunette divorcée Maud, his rigid ethical standards are challenged. A breakout hit in the United States, “My Night at Maud’s” was one of the most influential and talked-about films of the decade.

With an introduction and post-film discussion by Robert Garrick, attorney, board member of the French-preservation nonprofit Les Amis, and former contributor to the davekehr.com film blog.
