April 19 - 23, 2015 - Tivoli Theatre

THE YEAR WE THOUGHT ABOUT LOVE

SUNDAY, APRIL 19, 1 P.M.

ELLEN BRODSKY, 2014, U.S., 68 MIN.

What happens when a diverse group of LGBTQ youth dares to be "out" onstage? The film goes behind the scenes of one of the oldest queer-youth theaters in America, the Boston-based True Colors OUT Youth Theater, which transforms daily struggles into performance for social change. With wit, candor, and attitude, the cast captivates audiences surprised to hear such stories in school settings. The film introduces a transgender teenager kicked out of her house, a devout Christian challenging his church's homophobia, and a girl who prefers to wear boys' clothing even as she models dresses on the runway. When bombs explode outside their building, the troupe becomes even more determined to share their stories of love to help heal their city.

OUT IN THE NIGHT

TUESDAY, APRIL 21, 7 P.M.

BLAIR DOROSH-WALTER, 2014, U.S., 75 MIN.

This jaw-dropping documentary tells the story of a group of seven young African-American lesbians who are out walking in a gay-friendly neighborhood of New York City on an August night in 2006. When an older man sexually confronts them, one of the women says that they are gay, but that only escalates the situation: The man becomes violent and threatens to "fuck them straight." Two of the women defend the group, and another pulls a knife from her purse and swings at the man, with the entire encounter captured by nearby security cameras. Strangers jump in to defend the women, and the confrontation escalates, but as the fight comes to an end, all get up and walk away. However, the incident is far from over: 911 has been called, the man involved has been stabbed, and police swarm to the scene with their radios blasting out warning of a gang attack. Rounded up and charged with multiple counts, including attempted murder, three of the women plead guilty, but four claim their innocence. Called a "gang of killer lesbians" by the media, the defendants become known as the New Jersey 4 in activist circles.

SUNDAY, APRIL 19, 3:15 P.M.

CHERYL FURJANIC, 2014, U.S., 90 MIN.

A refreshingly candid documentary film about four-time Olympic champion Greg Louganis, "Back on Board" follows the diver over the past three years, as he struggles with financial security and reunites with the sport he once dominated but was not welcomed in. The threat of losing his house during the recent financial crisis forces Louganis to re-evaluate the choices, relationships, and missed opportunities of his career: With unprecedented access, the film reveals the complicated life of an athlete whose grace, beauty, and courage sparked a worldwide fascination with diving. It chronicles Louganis' rise from a difficult upbringing to nearly universal acclaim as the greatest diver ever and traces his path as he moves from a pioneering openly gay athlete with HIV to an overlooked sports icon. "Back on Board" is the engrossing story of an American legend as he re-emerges on the world stage to combat prejudice, promote tolerance, and return to the diving world after a long period of absence to act as a mentor to the next generation.

JEFFREY SCHWARZ, 2015, U.S., 90 MIN.

In the 1950s, Tab Hunter was No. 1 both at the box office and on the music charts. Hollywood's most sought-after star and America's boy next door, Hunter was romantically linked to such actresses as Natalie Wood, Debbie Reynolds, and Sophia Loren. Nothing, it seems, could damage Tab Hunter's career: Nothing, that is, except for the fact that he was secretly gay. Now, Hunter's secret is out, and in this revelatory documentary the actor shares the whole story of a happy, healthy survivor of Hollywood's roller coaster. In addition to Hunter's own frank recollections, the film features a cavalcade of old and new Hollywood players -- including Reynolds, Clint Eastwood, Robert Wagner, Connie Stevens, John Waters, Dolores Hart, Rona Barrett, and George Takei -- who talk openly about their personal experiences with the actor.
